| 16 | By evening, all that talking had made the prince dizzy. "Very well, Mother. I'll marry. I must say though, I've never cared much for princesses." |
| 27 | The illustration on this page depicts the queen standing next to the prince. His crown is flying upward over his head, and he has an excited expression on his face and there are hearts coming out from his abdomen. The prince is saying, "What a wonderful prince!" |
| 30 | The illustration on this page depicts two princes facing each other holding hands. A man is bending over near a red carpet and a young man with a crown is carrying a bouquet of flowers. A person in a red robe is reading from a paper. The words on the page read: The wedding was very special. The queen even shed a tear or two. See Figure 1. |
| 36 | The illustration on this page depicts the two kings kissing. There is a large red heart over their lips. See Figure 2. |
